Born and raised in New York City and have been fortunate to have my medical training across different regions of the United States, including New York, Tennessee, and now Washington State. I am Peruvian-American and have been involved with medical missions in Peru during my medical training. My interest in women's health began at an early age through my father, who is a general OB/GYN. As I became exposed to the subspecialty offerings within OB/GYN in residency, I became passionate about gynecologic oncology. My journey to this subspecialty has been unique and has allowed me to grow within this field through research, publications, and leadership positions.
